

AISC Quality Certified Fabricators

In an ideal world, an owner's representative would inspect the shop of every fabricator bidding on a project. Obviously, in the real world, such a time-consuming task is not practical. Fortunately, there is an alternative. The AISC Quality Certification Program can act as a pre-qualification system for structural steel fabricators.

The purpose of the AISC Quality Certification Program is to confirm to the construction industry that a Certified structural steel fabricating plant has the personnel, organization, experience, procedures, knowledge, equipment, capability, and commitment to produce fabricated steel of the required quality for a given category of structural steel certification.

Each December, Modern Steel Construction publishes a list of AISC Quality Certified fabricators as of press time. The list is updated frequently, so be sure to check the AISC web site for the latest listings at:

www.aisc.org/quality.html

Certification Categories

- Conventional Steel Building Structures (SBD): The certification is typically specified for small public service and institutional buildings (schools, etc.), shopping centers, light manufacturing plants, miscellaneous and ornamental iron work, warehouses, low-rise beam/column/light truss structures.
- Simple Steel Bridge Structures (SBR): The certification is typically specified for unspliced rolled beam bridges.
- Complex Steel Building Structures (CBD): The certification is typically specified for high-rise buildings large public service and institutional buildings, heavy manufacturing plants, powerhouses, petro/chemical processing
- Major Steel Bridges (CBR): The certification is typically specified for large span bridges. Main members are typically fabricated girders that must be spliced with a welded or bolted connection.
- Metal Building Systems (MB): Pre-engineered metal building systems including cold-formed members and panels.

Fabricators certified for Complex Steel Building Structures are automatically certified for Conventional Steel Building structures and those certified for Major Steel Bridges are automatically certified for Simple Steel Bridge Structures

- Sophisticated Paint System Endorsements (P1, P2, P3): There are currently three Paint Endorsements available:
 - P1—Sophisticated Paint Endorsement-Enclosed
 - P2—Sophisticated Paint Endorsement-Covered
 - P3—Sophisticated Paint Endorsement-Exposed
- Fracture Critical Members Endorsement (F): Familiarity with procedures required to produce fracture critical members in accordance with a fracture control plan as defined by AASHTO or AREA.
